The co-evolution of corporate and political power under intellectual monopoly capitalism.

Exploring the interplay between Big Tech, the US, and Chinese states.

Dr. Cecilia Rikap, City, University of London

Wednesday, 22 June 2022 | 16-18 c.t. | HS3 & Webex (hybrid)

Cecilia Rikap's research focuses on the political economy of science and technology. She currently studies the rising concentration of intangible assets focusing on the emergence of intellectual monopolies, among others from tech and pharma industries, the distribution of intellectual (including data) rents, resulting geopolitical tensions and the effects of knowledge assetization on the knowledge commons and development.
