

Auszug aus

“EBSCO License Agreement_Library eContent_ebooks_Feb 2026.pdf”

LAST UPDATED: Feb 2026

B. Library and Patron Usage.

1. Copyrighted Works.

- a. Library acknowledges and agrees that the copyright to the eContent is owned by or licensed to EBSCO and the respective publisher thereof. All Rights Reserved. By purchasing a license to eContent, Library obtains certain rights to access and use a copy of the eContent under this Agreement, but Library does not obtain or own any rights in the copyrights or any other intellectual property rights that may be associated with the eContent. Library agrees that any use of eContent by Library and its Patrons is governed by and will comply with applicable laws, including without limit U.S. copyright laws. Library acknowledges that it and its Patrons have no right to make copies of any eContent, or any portions thereof, except to the extent permitted by applicable copyright laws. Library may print or download limited portions of eContent, where such functionality is available, for the purposes of fulfilling interlibrary loan requests as long as those actions comply with Section 108 of the U.S. Copyright Act of 1976, as amended.
- b. Library acknowledges and agrees that repeated violations by Library or Patrons of copyright or other intellectual property right of EBSCO or any third party will give EBSCO the right to terminate this Agreement for cause.
- a. corresponds to each eContent license purchased by Library.

Auszug aus Abschnitt 108 des US-amerikanischen Urheberrechtsgesetzes von 1976:

Section 108 of the U.S. Copyright Act of 1976 (17 U.S.C. § 108) provides specific exemptions for libraries and archives to reproduce and distribute one copy of copyrighted works without permission. It permits, under strict conditions, copying for preservation, security, or to replace lost, damaged, or obsolete materials.

Key Aspects of Section 108:

Conditions: The library must be open to the public or researchers, and the reproduction must not be for direct/indirect commercial advantage.

Preservation/Replacement: Libraries may make up to three copies of a damaged, deteriorating, lost, or stolen work if a replacement cannot be obtained at a fair price.

Patron Access: Libraries may make a copy of an article or small part of a copyrighted work for a user, or an entire work if it cannot be obtained elsewhere, provided it becomes their property.

Digital Restrictions: Copies in digital format are allowed for preservation, but often cannot be made available to the public outside the library premises.

Safe Harbor: Section 108(f) protects libraries from liability for the unsupervised use of photocopying equipment located on their premises, provided they display a copyright warning.

Limits: This section does not apply to musical works, pictorial, graphic, or sculptural works, or motion pictures (except for archiving purposes).

Relationship to Fair Use: Section 108 is independent of, and does not limit, the fair use rights under Section 107.