

Call for Applications reference number 02/2021

At the Collaborative Research Centre (SFB) Transregio 294 "The Structural Transformation of Property", which is hosted at the Universities of Jena and Erfurt, the following academic research position is advertised at the University of Erfurt, part of the project A1 "Divine property: Solutions from Late Antiquity and the Early Middle Ages" (Project leaders: Proff. Dres. Jörg Rüpke and Markus Vinzent). The part-time position (26 hours per week) is available as soon as possible.

Research assistant (m/f/d)

Pay category E 13 TV-L (65 %)

Area of Responsibility

- Participation in the research tasks as well as the preparation and realization of events of the interdisciplinary Collaborative Research Centre "The Structural Change of Property"
(<https://www.uni-erfurt.de/max-weber-kolleg/forschung/forschungsgruppen-und-stellen/forschungsgruppen/sonderforschungsbereich-transregio-294-strukturwandel-des-eigentums>)
- Work on project A1a „Ancient and late antique ideas of Divine property“ within the Collaborative Research Centre. The successful applicant will investigate in particular the question to what extent thinking about divine property and God/Gods as owners changed the concepts and forms of human property. For this purpose, poetic texts from the late republican-imperial Latin literature will be analyzed with regard to their concepts and forms of argumentation. They will be interpreted against the background and in their effect on contemporary sacral, social, and economic practices.
- willingness to pursue an academic qualification (for example a doctorate) at the University of Erfurt

Requirements

- excellent degree (Master or equivalent) in Religious Studies, Classics or Ancient History
- knowledge of Latin or (preferably: and) Greek
- methodical reflectiveness of the thesis
- willingness to engage with the methods and concepts of the Collaborative Research Centre "The Structural Transformation of Property"
- documented interest in pursuing a doctorate in an interdisciplinary research environment
